

List [1 point each = 10 points]

Copy (yes, physically write) each word, its part of speech, the definition, and at least TWO (2) antonyms and synonyms in a notebook, on a vocabulary sheet, or on a note card

- example:
1. antagonize (v) to make hostile or unfriendly synonyms: bother, irritate antonyms: charm, persuade
  2. chronology (n) the arrangement of events, dates, etc. in a certain order of occurrence
synonyms: order, arrangement antonyms: disorder, disarray

Sentences [3 points each sentence = 15 points]

Select any 5 vocabulary words from the list. For each word selected write a thoughtful sentence or sentences using the vocabulary word.

- each vocabulary word must be used correctly (part of speech) [.25 point]
- each vocabulary word must be spelled correctly [.5 point]
- each vocabulary word should be highlighted, circled, or somehow “marked” so that it stands out in the sentence for easy teacher viewing [.25 point]
- each sentence must have context for the vocabulary word without using all or significant parts of the definition [2 points].

*Remember, context is the hints that “give away” the meaning of the vocabulary word.

natty (adj) neatly or trimly smart in dress or appearance; spruce:

bad example: The natty man was interesting.

There is no context. I can replace the vocabulary word “natty” with the word old and the sentence is fine. Nothing in the sentence contradicts natty meaning old. A sentence with good context will provide good hints as to the meaning of the word—without using all or significant parts of the definition.

good example: The natty officer looked sharp. His uniform was spotless and freshly pressed; he was clothed to impress.

“[L]ooking sharp”, “uniform was spotless”, “freshly pressed”, and “clothed to impress” work together to provide excellent hints as to the meaning of “natty”. If I tried to insert “old” for natty the sentence just doesn’t make much sense.
